

Hopkins Says Less Cost for Power and Homes Is Needed

Secretary of Commerce Gives First Report; Says Huge Prosperity Could Hinge on Reductions

Praises New Deal

Says Spending Has Revived Business; Cooperation Is Needed

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—Harry L. Hopkins, in his first annual report as secretary of commerce, said today the nation could build tremendous prosperity by extending its mass-production technique toward lowering the prices of power, homes and other essentials.

Hopkins, the former WPA boss, drafted into his report, written from the sickbed that has confined him for months, a virtual economic textbook of the New Deal.

His main thesis was that the old prejudice against government tinkering with economics permitted business to drag itself to the brink of collapse in 1933; that since then New Deal spending and reform have revived business and that the 1937 recession was caused by misuse rather than use of the spending device. Hopkins, a close friend of President Roosevelt, followed this up with the declaration that "we have only begun to fulfill the unlimited promise of America."

Fulfillment Is Ahead

If only business, labor and the government would work together to make things cheaper and more efficient, he said, fulfillment is ahead. Labor, he explained, should strive for better annual wages and permit reasonable hourly rates to facilitate efficient production.

Hopkins asserted that rate reductions under the Tennessee Valley Authority had proved his theory by causing an 88 per cent increase in the use of electricity in the valley within a few years. Most of the 25,000,000 American families with incomes of less than $2,000 a year, he added, might buy homes if one would build them to sell for $2,500 instead of $4,000 and up.

"To look at the problem from the point of view of prices," he wrote, "rather than income, a vast potential market awaits further progress in the application of mass production techniques. x x x. "If it were feasible to reduce electric rates through the nation to the levels now prevailing in the Tennessee Valley region, the demand for electricity would so expand as to require an investment in generating and transmission facilities, in wiring and appliances, of billions of dollars.

Tracing New Deal spending, in which he was once a key figure both as an ideological sponsor and as an active practitioner through WPA, Hopkins said recovery since 1933 had proved its wisdom. He blamed the 1937 recession in part on payment of the soldiers bonus in 1936. The bonus money, he argued, caused too big a bulge in spending and the next year there was an economic let-down.

Think They've Got Him

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 30 (AP)—Ossining police believed today they had the leader of two "reporters" and "music lovers" who stole six valuable fur coats from an Ossining woman's club meeting and a musical of the Bronxville Woman's Club two weeks ago. Police Lieutenant Frank Carlson arrested Elbert Giroux, Jr., 27, at 22 West 53rd street, after his photograph had been picked from the New York rogues' gallery by one of the women victims. They held him on a charge of "suspicion of a felony" and planned to arraign him later.

Three Reported Killed

Moscow, Dec. 30 (AP)—The army newspaper Red Star reported today that three "spies and diversionists" of an unnamed foreign country were killed in a clash with Red army soldiers on the Soviet Union's southwest frontier. A fourth member of the group, which had crossed the border into Russia, was captured and "now is no longer dangerous," the paper said. One Russian soldier was wounded. Rumania and Hungary are Russia's southwestern neighbors.

Roosevelts Are Resting

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and his wife, the former Ethel duPont, who were injured in an automobile accident in nearby Virginia yesterday, were reported today to have had a restful night. Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, said neither had any temperature and that both complained today only of stiffness and soreness.

J. A. Johnson Elected

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 30 (AP)—James A. Johnson of Allegany was elected president yesterday of the Associated Academic Principals of New York state. Dr. Hugh N. Stewart of Mount Vernon was named vice-president. It was erroneously reported yesterday that Dr. Stewart was named president and Johnson vice-president.

Sonny Boy Gets a Smile

Al Jolson, singer and actor, greets Al Jolson, Jr., with a smile as father meets son on the latter's arrival in New York city for a visit. Ruby Keeler, obtaining a Los Angeles divorce from Jolson, gained custody of the four-year-old adopted boy in a settlement.

City Budget for 1940 Meets With Approval

There was no opposition voiced at the public hearing Friday evening in the 1940 tax budget, which, if adopted, fixes the tax rate at $39.92, an increase of 96 cents over this year's tax rate.

Action on the budget will be taken up at the first regular monthly meeting of the common council in January.

The hearing last evening was attended by a number of city officials and several citizens.

Radcliffe Jailed By Watzka After Plank Road Crash

Washington Avenue Man Is Fined as Intoxicated Driver; His Wife's Shoulder Broken

William Radcliffe, 23, of 345 Washington avenue was arrested last evening at his home by Sheriff Abram F. Molyneaux and Deputies Vredenburgh and McCullough following an automobile accident near the Kennedy place on the Plank road. About 10:30 o'clock Friday evening it was reported a car had turned over on the highway on a curve near the Kennedy place.

On investigating it was found Radcliffe and his wife had been injured and a passing car bearing a New York license was stopped to convey them to the hospital. They failed to go to the hospital although Mr. Radcliffe reported to Sheriff Abram Molyneaux that his wife had suffered a broken shoulder.

Arrested by Officers

When they failed to reach the hospital the officers went to the Washington avenue address and arrested Radcliffe on a charge of operating a motor car while intoxicated and also operating a car without a license. Before Justice Watzka a fine of $50 on the drunken driving charge was imposed and $10 for operating a car without a license. When the fines were not paid he was committed to jail for 60 days.

The new quakes were accompanied by deep underground rumblings, but the extent of damage was not determined immediately.

The first trainload of injured from the great earthquake of Wednesday was enroute to Ankara. The victims, all in need of surgical attention, included a number of high ranking Turkish officers and one general.

Planes Drop Food

Military planes flew over Erzincan, dropping bundles of food and clothing to survivors who huddled half-naked in snow-covered fields. Gen. Kiazim Orbay was in charge of aiding survivors and digging victims from the countless ruined buildings.

Rescue of many persons in the isolated districts appeared hopeless as snow continued to block highways and rail communications.

Officials said children and women particularly were falling victims to the continued bitter cold, 25 and 30 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

The entire Turkish nation was mobilized for relief, and help was sent from other countries.

It was announced that Great Britain contributed £100,000 (about $400,000).

All New Year's parties in Turkey were cancelled to help work

Miss Marie Groppe of Ellenville, who has been confidential clerk to District Attorney Cleon B. Murray, will retain that position under District Attorney-elect N. LeVan Haver, who becomes district attorney of Ulster county on New Year's. Miss Groppe has filled the position very efficiently for several years under Mr. Murray.

The car was owned by Mr. Wittman of Kerhonkson, an employee on the water works project, who was also with the party but who told the officers that he had allowed Radcliffe to drive because he believed he was in better shape to operate the car. The Ford sedan went off the road and turned up on its top.

Despite the incident, Ligon said he intended to run another show in two weeks, but if another amateur card is arranged (and it probably won't be) the city fathers will demand a guarantee that it goes through as scheduled and so will Ben M. Becker, boxing chairman of the Adirondack A. U.

Boxing Show Turns Into Super Farce; Fans Get Refunds

Patrons Wait Until 10 P.M. And Then Set Up Howl and Police Are Rushed Over to Auditorium

A farce that was a farce was the amateur boxing card scheduled for last night at the municipal auditorium.

The show that didn't go on was a big disappointment to the director of bouts, Walter Ligon of Newburgh, and the 200 fans who patronized the bouts.

Ligon's disappointment was the exceptionally small turnout for the bill of fights featuring the nationally famous Buddy Moore of New York, Golden Gloves champion, who soon is to defend his title, and Eddie Kowalski, Binghamton heavyweight, who holds a decision over Charlie Ketchuck, once his stablemate, who is considered a good professional prospect now.

Fans' Big Howl

The fans' big howl was that the show didn't go on, and that they were kept waiting until almost 10 o'clock before their money was refunded at the boxoffice, which was surrounded by a battery of police sent in by Chief Charles Phinney to handle the situation.

It was the consensus of opinion among the patrons that the show should have been presented as scheduled, regardless of the poor turnout, and men formerly connected with amateur boxing in Kingston agreed with them, saying that such disappointments to fans hurt sports promoted at the auditorium.

Several aldermen in attendance, discussing the situation, said that plans would be talked over concerning a requirement for a guarantee that future promotions would be staged regardless of patronage.

Kingston boxing figures, formerly connected with amateuristic shows, were of the opinion early in the evening that there would be no crowd. By 8:45 they were certain that the attendance would be poor, judging from the way the fans used to turn out for previous shows by that time.

On investigating it was found Radcliffe and his wife had been injured and a passing car bearing a New York license was stopped to convey them to the hospital. They failed to go to the hospital although Mr. Radcliffe reported to Sheriff Abram Molyneaux that his wife had suffered a broken shoulder.

The show, scheduled for 9:15 o'clock, was held up and at 9:30 the patrons began to demand whether they would be bouts. Fifteen minutes later there was an announcement that their money would be refunded, then another came that the show would go on.

A third announcement was that A. third announcement was that it was definitely off and that tickets would be redeemed at the box office.

There was a rush for the ticket windows, but the line for refunds was put in order by the police and all those who sought their money back were paid.

Despite the incident, Ligon said he intended to run another show in two weeks, but if another amateur card is arranged (and it probably won't be) the city fathers will demand a guarantee that it goes through as scheduled and so will Ben M. Becker, boxing chairman of the Adirondack A. U.

No Changes

Mayor C. J. Heiselman announced today that no changes would be made in city officials the first of the year, but that those who have been serving the city for the past two years would be reappointed.

The alternative order was reported decided upon by President Alfredo Baldomir on grounds that the Tacoma had served as an auxiliary for the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee, now a dynamited mass of wreckage in the silt of the river Plate estuary.

The commander of the Graf Spee, confronted by a similar order, choose the middle course between internment and facing British warships which had driven the Graf Spee, heavily damaged by gunfire, into Montevideo harbor.

Captain Hans Langsdorff scuttled the Graf Spee December 17 upon Adolf Hitler's orders and three days later took his life with his Mauser pistol in the Buenos Aires Naval arsenal.

Observers waiting for the Uruguayan order to the Tacoma wondered what show of Allied naval force would confront the vessel, if she chose to put to sea.

At least one factor in the reported decision that the Tacoma acted as a warship auxiliary—thus becoming ineligible for refuge rights accorded merchant ships of belligerent nations—was that the Tacoma picked up crewmen from the scuttled battleship.

Uruguayan officials were said to hold that the Tacoma did this at Langsdorff's orders.

Labor department attorneys said that approval of the Landis report by Miss Perkins would mean the cancellation of the deportation warrant issued against Bridges in March, 1938, and the closing of the case.

In a voluminous report weighing and criticizing the credibility of witnesses who paraded to the stand with evidence offered to show the CIO leader was linked with the Communist party, Landis said that the testimony failed to establish that he had joined the party.

Landis made no recommendation but his finding was expected to carry great weight with Secretary Perkins in her final determination of whether Bridges can remain in his adopted land.

Landis Says Harry Bridges Is 'Energetically Radical' But Not Communist, So He May Escape Being Deported

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—A finding that Harry Bridges was "energetically radical" in his aims but was not a member of nor affiliated with the Communist Party opened the way today for the west coast CIO leader to escape deportation to his native Australia.

The finding was submitted to Secretary of Labor Perkins by James M. Landis, Harvard Law School dean, appointed by the secretary to conduct a hearing to determine whether Bridges was deportable.

Landis made no recommendation but his finding was expected to carry great weight with Secretary Perkins in her final determination of whether Bridges can remain in his adopted land.

Since he could find no evidence to prove the allegation of membership or affiliation, Landis did not make any findings on the question of whether Bridges can remain in his adopted land.

Uruguayan officials were said to hold that the Tacoma did this at Langsdorff's orders.

John, Dorothy Moran Injured In Neighborhood Road Crash

In Line

Children of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Moran Are in Hospital; Son Suffers Skull Fracture, Brain Hemorrhage; Girl Sustains Broken Legs

John Moran, 20, son of Joseph P. Moran, retired president of the New York City Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, was injured seriously about 9:45 o'clock Friday evening, in a motor car crash on the Neighborhood road in the town of Ulster, and his sister, Dorothy Moran, 18, suffered broken legs when their Packard sedan failed to make a turn and sideswiped a tree.

Moran, a sophomore at Fordham University, was reported conscious this morning at the Kingston Hospital where he is under care of Dr. Frederick Snyder. He suffered a fractured skull and a hemorrhage of the brain for which he underwent an operation at the hospital. His condition is serious.

The accident happened as the two young people were en route from the Copeland Gates home to Kingston to meet their father who was to arrive in town by train.

Mr. and Mrs. Moran reside at 300 Pearl street, Kingston, with their family.

Sheriff Abram F. Molyneaux with Deputies Vredenburgh and McCullough were summoned to the scene and found that the Packard car had failed to make the turn west of the West Shore tracks just beyond the intersection which leads to the Pratt Boice property. The car was being driven toward Kingston at the time and left the road on the curve and crashed into a tree on the right of the road, crushing the car on the right side where Miss Moran was seated. She suffered fractures of the legs.

The car was very badly damaged about the right front and was practically wrecked. When Sheriff Molyneaux arrived at the scene and found the two injured people had been taken to the hospital by William Powers and Donald Abernethy, who were following the Moran car in the Powers car from the Gates home. Mr. Gates also was summoned and brought the occupants of the Powers car to their home when the Powers car was turned over to convey the injured to the hospital.

Both young people had been spending the Christmas season with their parents and were on their way to the station to meet their father, who was to reach town about 10 o'clock by rail.

WAR SABOTAGE

Hunting down and eliminating the "spies and saboteurs" in American industry is probably a necessary business, but a very delicate one. The best evidence of necessity revealed so far is the discovery of a deliberate weakening of the structural parts of airplanes meant for army use. Rods and braces had been sawed part way through and the cuts soldered over. Thus they looked all right, but a strain would break the structure and wreck the plane.

Mischief might be done in many factories, on machinery and materials meant for our own government and foreign governments. There might be workmen bribed for such sabotage, or doing it of their own will from a perverted sense of duty. So a careful watch has to be kept.

It would be very unfortunate, though, if anything like a political or racial or ideological "witch hunt" developed in any branch of American industry, business or social life. The overwhelming majority of our people, no matter what their political views or racial origin, are too loyal or too decent for any such devilry. Indiscriminate suspicion and insinuation would do more harm than an occasional act of genuine sabotage.

Except when there are good reasons for suspicion, it is better to believe in people than to disbelieve in them.

BEST ARCHITECTURE

Don't scorn houses because they're old. If experts know what they're talking about, the best homes in America were built in the forty years just before the Civil War. The architectural character of American towns from the Atlantic to the Great Lakes and the Mississippi was formed during that period, says Talbot F. Hamlin of the Columbia University School of Architecture.

"Never before or since," he declares, "has there been a period when the general level of excellence was so high in American architecture, when the ideal was so constant and its varying expressions so harmonious, when the towns and villages, large and small, had in them so much of unostentatious unity and loveliness. Walking through such towns, one falls at once under the influence of this spirit and feels that the buildings were designed by, and built for, a people who had a new, vivid, almost overwhelming esthetic sensitiveness and love of beauty in form and line."

In town after town, he adds, in Connecticut and New York and Ohio and various southern states, the seeker will find both large and small houses of the '30s and '40s all with the same "manners," the same rightness of proportion and graciousness of detail.

It is a sad drop from that, he thinks, to much of the house-building of the last decade or two, with its confusion of materials and colors and lack of pleasing proportion. Our vaunted "modern homes" have more comfort and convenience, more tricks and gadgets, and cost a great deal more, but too often lack the charm and beauty of a century ago.

A REFUGEE ON DEMOCRACY

An 18-year-old immigrant boy has recently won two prizes in a New York high school. He came to this country nine months ago, a Jewish refugee from Europe. One prize of $25 was awarded for the best essay in his school. The other, $15, was for the best essay submitted by a senior.

The boy wrote about his flight from Germany and later from Italy. He must have had plenty of interesting material and handled it well. One paragraph, quoted in the New York Post, suggests that the United States will acquire a fine new citizen if Erich Hirschberg remains here.

"Democracy," he wrote, "is not a beautiful painting to be looked at and sung of; it is a living reality that must be worked for and, if necessary, fought for. He who has once lived in servitude knows that only liberty makes life livable."

BOY-APPEAL

Another Mickey has risen to first place in popular esteem. He is no real rival to the still beloved Mickey Mouse. The two, though both screen heroes, operate in quite different realms. Mickey Mouse is a figment of an artist's imagination. Mickey Rooney is a homely young man who is pretty much like a lot of boys everybody knows.

There are those who complain that Mickey Rooney "mugs" too much. But there are far more who think everything he does is great and there couldn't be too much of any of it. That is why Mickey Rooney is first of the big ten screen performers as rated by box office response to his pictures. He has displaced Shirley Temple and run ahead of other former favorites, jumping from fourth place rating last year.

The parts Mickey takes on the screen are wholesome, and they are humorous. Adults laugh and think both of their own youth and the problems presented by their children today.

There's nothing very seriously wrong with a nation's character and outlook on life when it takes such delight in a "regular" boy in preference to the great lovers and glamor-dispensers.

We're a prosaic people; we throw hats into the ring, but no guns or crowns.

MENTAL AND PHYSICAL DISEASES

In former days every patient of a mental institution was crazy and it was only the barred windows and the high brick walls that made it safe for passers-by. To have a member of one's family placed in a mental institution was about the greatest disgrace possible.

Today mental patients enjoy many of the privileges of those outside because the more they learn about what is going on about them, the sooner is it likely that they will be able to mix with others and take their rightful places in the world.

The establishment of mental clinics where patients can go of their own free will when they realize that their fears, worries, and nervousness are making them less fit for their work, has been of great help in preventing many from having to enter mental institutions.

Another great step forward is suggested by Dr. Charles Burlingame, Hartford, Conn., in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"I think the day is coming when we shall stop talking about 'mental' disease and 'physical' disease because I am convinced that it is an artificial and wrongful separation. The human organism becomes ill and one cannot separate the human organism in to separate parts any more than one can consider him apart from his surroundings. Thus it was thought a short time ago that dementia paralytica (a chronic disease of the brain marked by progressive loss of physical and mental power) was a 'mental' disease and then it was discovered to be caused by the organism of syphilis. Does this make dementia paralytica a physical disease with mental symptoms? It may be shown that there is scarcely a physical disorder that does not have its mental symptoms—a carbuncle on a patient's neck has a definite influence on his personality."

Similarly the high strung, slender, nervous individual (mental) is usually the type that "grows" or develops stomach ulcers (physical).

It can readily be seen what it will mean when there will be no distinction between mental and physical ailments. The patient will be treated according to the cause of his symptoms.

"Psychiatry (study of mental diseases) can well profit by the painstaking research of the general practitioner and the general practitioner can learn much from the psychiatrist who has studied the effects of the emotions upon the organs and processes of the body."

Neurosis

Sent for this interesting booklet by Dr. Barton entitled "Neurosis" (No. 103), which deals with such topics as hysteria, anxiety, the feeling of being compelled to do foolish things, the state of being afraid of some disease which is not present. Send your request to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y., enclosing ten cents and mentioning the Kingston Daily Freeman.

Twenty and Ten Years Ago

Dec. 30, 1919.—Forty cases of measles were reported in Kingston.

Kingston Tailors' Association filed articles of incorporation.

Dr. Frank A. Johnston re-elected health officer by Board of Health.

President Samuel M. Watts presented with gavel at last meeting of common council for the year.

Dec. 30, 1929.—Residence of Charles W. King at 14 Elizabeth street selected by the judges as the best decorated home in the Central Hurson Gas and Electric Corporation Christmas lighting contest in Annual banquet of the Ulster County Supervisors' Association held in the Stuyvesant Hotel.

Lowest temperature recorded by the Freeman thermometer during the night was 34 degrees.

The Rev. Gregory Mabry planned to celebrate ten years' service at Holy Cross Church on Sunday, January 5, 1930.

Social Security

Editor's Note: Every worker who has a Social Security account number card should have the recent Congressional changes in the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance provisions of the Social Security Act mailed to him or her. For the benefit of readers of The Kingston Daily Freeman, the Social Security Board's field office manager for Charles E. Burke has prepared a series of brief articles, each explaining one point of the new provisions.

Under the original Social Security Act, wages received by a worker after his 65th birthday did not count toward old-age insurance benefits. Under the amended law, this "stop-date" at age 65 has been removed, so that an employee in commerce or industry may continue to build up his credits toward benefits as long as he remains at work.

A store, mill, factory or office worker who was 65 or more when the original act went into effect on January 1, 1937, can now receive credit for all wages paid to him in covered employment since 1938. In other words, the amendment with regard to workers past 65 years of age became effective as of January 1, 1939. Beginning with that date, wages received in commercial and industrial employment count toward insurance benefits regardless of the age of the worker.

The amended law with respect to older commercial and industrial workers is summarized as follows:

1. A wage earner who reached age 65 after 1936 and before 1939 will count toward his benefits, all wages he was paid after 1936 and before his 65th birthday, plus all wages he was paid after 1938.

2. A wage earner who reaches 65 at any time during the year 1939 or thereafter, can count toward benefits all the wages he received since the original act went into effect.

A wage earner who was 65 years old before 1937, will count toward his benefits only the wages paid to him after 1938.

Kingstonians Ready to Ring in New Year in Three Days of Festivities

New Year's Eve falling on Sunday this year gives Kingstonians an opportunity for three days of celebrating. Some of the parties will be held on Saturday and others on Sunday and Monday. What promises to be an enthusiastic greeting of a new year has been arranged throughout the county.

Observers of the new year will be divided into four different groups. There will be those who will attend the Assembly Ball at the Governor Clinton Hotel and the officers' ball at the armory this evening. There will be others who will assemble in hotels and restaurants and still others who will have home parties. A social party will be held at Trinity Methodist Church preceding the union watch night service which many plan to attend from private parties.

The assembly dance usually attended by society to usher in the new year will be held this evening instead of on New Year's Eve and is expected to draw 75 couples.

The Crystal room at the hotel where the dance will be held has already been decorated for the season with Christmas trees and greens. To this setting will be added a profusion of poinsettias as added decoration for the assembly dance. Paul Zucca's orchestra will play for the dancing.

Among those entertaining before the dance will be Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. King, who will entertain at a dinner for 10 at their home, 127 Fair street. Mr. and Mrs. John D. Schoonmaker, Jr., will be hosts to 20 guests at a buffet supper at their home, 281 Albany avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Davenport and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herzog will be co-hosts to 28 guests at a buffet supper at the home of the former in Stone Ridge.

A group of 11 couples consisting of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Sterley, Mayor and Mrs. Conrad J. Heiselman, Mr. and Mrs. John L. MacKinnon, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ramer, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pemberton, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin L. Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Peyer, Dr. and Mrs. Mortimer B. Downer, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Colligan, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Grimm and Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Styles will join for dinner at the hotel preceding the dance.

Dancing will be from 10 until

Herzog's Guidepost

To better living

THE best of the old year, now slipping away so fast, is that it was peopled with folks we like to remember.

There was the lady who said she enjoyed looking around that day. A motherly, good-natured woman. You know the type? The kind who can always stir up a cake in just no time at all.

As her package was being wrapped she walked around looking at things in our basement. After glancing up to speak to an acquaintance who was examining tea strainers, she said,

"I like to look at these little things down here, don't you? They remind me of things I've got at home I forgot to use."

And there was the woman in her neat black coat who came in, with her husband, to look at stainless steel utensils.

We showed her some beautiful pots and pans. How she coveted them! Yet she hesitated, thinking maybe she shouldn't pay the difference for stainless steel. Finally she looked inquiringly at her husband.

Standing with his hands thrust deep into his mackinaw pockets, he said decisively,

"When I need tools, I come here to buy the very best tools I can get. Why shouldn't you?"

His wife picked out the utensils she needed — in stainless steel.

One day a customer from New Paltz confided,

"I'd been wanting a cookie press so badly — but I never dreamed I could get them in the table in the GUIDEPOST that you had them."

We recall a pleasant chat, too, with our Woodstock customer who related how charmed she was by the Kingston custom of hanging out baskets for mail.

It reminded her, she said, of the baskets hung out to receive New Year Day calling cards in her native South.

Before she left she gave us a recipe (reprinted at end of column) for eggnog, the traditional beverage always proffered those who called on New Year Day.

Though the figures on our records say it was a good year, we take pleasure in reckoning by the customer-friends whose visits we enjoyed—and in the growth we've made.

Last March, Chris Reardon joined the Herzog organization as manager of the retail store, 332 Wall street, after 14 years with the Schryver Lumber Co.

More recently the services of the store have been increased by Ann Herzog in the capacity of decorating consultant.

When, a few months ago, the GUIDEPOST was dedicated "To Better Living," the ambition was to tell you about little things that might keep life from merely going "round and round to meet another turn." We hoped to tell you of things that would help to put home life on the zestful side.

Sometimes the right new color or on the wall does it.

One Is Beloved

BY LOUISE PLATT HAUCK

YESTERDAY: Cecily vanishes from St. Joseph as quickly as she came, leaving Pat in a bad spot. Pat has antagonized Sue and now wants the luxuries Sue can give her.

Chapter 24
Eric

WHEN Pats, temporarily disengaged in her effort to break down Sue's calm aloofness, had departed, Barbara gave her hostess' hand a congratulatory squeeze.

"Good for you, honey! That's putting her in her place. I can't forgive her for the way she toaded to Cecily all summer."

On Sue's small dark face lay a sudden shadow.

"You can't make people over, Babs dear! I haven't the slightest hope that my brief period of discipline will do my precious sister-in-law any real good. The most I can accomplish is to teach her to show an outward loyalty to Allen's family. Poor Allen! If the baby had only lived!"

Her friend said sapiently: "He'd have been more unhappy than ever, my dear. You and I can imagine the sort of mother Pats would make. Either she'd spoil a child till it was unbearable, or she'd be so severe by fits and starts that Allen would protest. They'd quarrel, he and Patsy, and that would be a nice atmosphere for a child to grow up in, wouldn't it?"

Sue shaded her eyes against the light of the leaping flames.

"It's best as it is, of course; but oh, Barbara, it's hard to know Allen's made such a mess of his marriage!"

A week later she met Patsy downtown by appointment and bought, not the luxurious garments which were the older woman's choice, but simple, severely cut things of the best material. Only the purchase of two extremely expensive evening gowns consoled their owner for what she called "being bullied into taking the old-maidish sort of clothes Sue wears herself."

Something Vital

A FEW weeks after this, the thing Sue had been subconsciously dreading all her married life happened: she fell completely, passionately and unreasonably in love with another man.

It came, as such things are apt to come, just when she felt safest. She and Bob had settled down into a comfortable jog trot of marriage. The crisis of Cecily had been met and conquered. Sue, believing this to be the greatest test which could be exacted of her affection for her husband, relaxed her anxiety about the future.

Ironically enough it was in Patsy's living room it was through the sister-in-law of whom Sue always more or less disappeared, that she met Eric Farraday.

"She's home, but she's got company," old Maggie had said with the significant emphasis which indicated the sex of Mrs. Davenport's caller.

"Hello, Sue!"

Pats, wearing a hostess gown that had not been one of Sue's purchases for her, and lounging, cocktail in hand before the fire, looked up without rising.

"Mr. Farraday, my husband's sister, Mrs. Trenton, she went on, "Eric, make your prettiest bow to the lady. She's got scads!"

Sue flushed a little at the bad taste of it; liked the way the tall stranger ignored the admonition. He was rather a surprising person to find here, she told herself: lean, almost ascetic looking, with a streak of white running at either temple through his dark hair, gray eyes mildly amused behind their pince-nez.

The name rang a faint bell in her consciousness.

"Eric Farraday—the Mr. Farraday?"

He gave her a formal little bow but before he could reply Patsy said indolently:

"Exactly, my dear! Columnist, essayist, critic! Now ask me how I lured him into my parlor."

Sheer astonishment kept Sue silent. Farraday, as all the world knew, was the author of a volume of essays full of a strange and bitter wisdom. His weekly column was a controversial affair which had torn apart many a literary club, had provoked acrimonious discussion among staid business men. His was the dubious gift of probing the average man's and woman's heart, and voicing their most unworthy sentiments so that only the blindest egotist repudiated them.

Black eyes and gray exchanged a long appraising look.

"I have a cousin here of whom I'm very fond. He's ill—mortally ill. I'm afraid, I'm staying on until there's a change, one way or another."

He gave the explanation quite as though she had a right to it; there was a simple friendliness in his manner which clearly surprised his hostess who said so.

"Look here! Have you and Sue met before? I've never heard you talk so—simply before. Eric. Usually you seem to be poking fun away down deep in your mind at everything I say."

Neither of the two heard her. They fell into talk at once: earnest, purposeful talk that all the world might have listened to, but which had an odd air of intimacy about it nevertheless. When Sue stood up to go, Eric said quite openly that he'd accompany her on the errand she had mentioned.

Patsy watched them with half-closed eyes. Usually the least perceptible creature alive, she knew that something vital, something important had taken place here in the last quarter of an hour. The promising flirtation into which she and Farraday had been drifting was as if it had never been, she knew. Not that she minded that! The man was too clever for her, she was always slightly uncomfortable, he used toward her.

She hoped to exhibit him as her captive celebrity, had chafed at his bland refusal to go on display. When a few days before she had privately invited a select group of friends to meet him, he had not scrupled to punish her by turning away at the door when he heard the sound of voices.

Highbrows

"IF IT was anything but Sue I'd say they had been—well, pretty good friends sometime in the past," she mused. "But Sue's no actress; she'd never laid eyes on him when she came into this room a little while ago. Highbrow recognizing highbrow, I suppose," she concluded with a contemptuous little shrug of her shoulders.

Down on the street Eric asked abruptly: "Walking or driving?"

"Walking. At least as far as the garage where I left my car."

They fell into step almost silently: It was the man who spoke first.

"Who?" he demanded. "are you? Don't say Mrs. Davenport's sister-in-law. That tells me nothing. Who and what are you yourself?"

Her heart was hurrying, the bright color flamed suddenly into her face but she said with composure: "That's a difficult question to answer, isn't it? We're each of us so many persons, a separate one for each of our friends, the people we love."

"What are you going to be to me?" There was no least trace of flirtatiousness in the question. It was the earnest inquiry of one deeply interested.

"A passing acquaintance perhaps. Tell me more about your cousin. What hospital is he in?"

A rasping note of impatience crept into his voice. "Don't waste time! As it is we've met too late—or you will probably think so. Mrs. Trenton, Pats said. So you're married. Have you children?"

She shook her head. She found her thoughts frantically summoning Bob—Allen—Barbara; all the safeguards and foundations on which she had built her life. It was fantastic, she assured herself, it was more than that, it was incredible that a strange voice, the look of a pair of strange eyes should be doing these frightening things to her! She summoned her natural dignity and told him:

"I'm really not a very interesting person. Please don't make the mistake of over-rating me. It would be so horribly humiliating to have you do so and then find me out!"

He was silent so long that she glanced up at him to find something like real anger in his lean face.

It's unworthy of you—that sort of talk! I won't have it! Must I cross-examine you, or will you tell me about yourself?"

Sue, the high-spirited, Sue who resented the least attempt at familiarity from a stranger, answered him meekly.

"I'm Bob Trenton's wife—Trenton's Treadons, you know. We live in a big house with a garden. I... I've read everything you've written. I think; wondered about you certainly. I never expected to meet you."

"Did you like what you read?"

"No, nor admired it; but admired your power to read us all like open books and reduce us to the simplest terms of the written word."

"Yes, it's a damnable gift—if one can call it a gift! It's made me the loneliest soul on earth, I think."

"Why do you exercise it then?"

He gave a wry smile. "What else would you have me do, my dear? Sell Treadons? Open a real estate office? Be a dentist? Be sides? I suppose I take a rufel delight in making thousands squirm. It's power and power is what we all long for, isn't it?"

She considered. "Men, perhaps. Not many women. Women want... love."

"Another name for the same thing. There is no greater power on earth than love—while it lasts."

"No; you shan't do it. Lure me into a discussion in which I'll come off second best—utterly defeated," she declared lightly. "And here's where I left my car."

She extended a small gloved hand. "It's been delightful meeting you. I hope your cousin will make a safe recovery!"

tration, and new students may enter most of the classes.

The machine shop and auto mechanics classes are already filled, but a reserve list is kept for new applicants. In woodworking, trade electricity, and power sewing machines, there are a few vacancies which will be filled by the first applicants and others placed on reserve.

The homemaking courses in sewing and cooking are given on alternate evenings. Students may register for either course or both. The aim of these courses is to meet the practical needs of women in their homes.

The new course in retail selling will be reorganized. Former students may return and new students are urged to enroll. Speakers who are successful salesmen are brought in to present in an interesting manner their various methods of salesmanship. Anyone employed in any phase of selling is invited to join this class.

Bookkeeping, typing and shorthand are open to all, who wish to attend, regardless of previous training or experience, as the instruction is mostly individual.

A small but interested group began the study of Spanish last fall. New students with at least a high school education are invited to join this class.

The school has a large group of foreign born Americans in the Americanization class. Others who desire a better knowledge of the English language and American institutions are invited to enroll.

No Invitation Yet
Says Donnaruma

Editor, Kingston Daily Freeman, Kingston, New York.

Dear Mr. Editor:
I noted in last evening's issue of The Freeman that City Clerk Edgar Dempsey stated that I had received an invitation to the special budget conference held in the mayor's office the other evening. As yet no invitation has appeared and I am afraid that the dead letter office or Jim Farley himself will have to conduct an investigation to locate that very mysterious invitation.

On previous occasions when special meetings of the council were held and a quorum could not be obtained to transact city business, the city clerk's office was always able to communicate with me and on all those occasions I was present.

When such an important meeting is held to discuss the financial condition of the city no effort was made to check and see if the members of the council were invited.

Apparently some stream-lining needs to be done somewhere. If the administration is not even successful in notifying council members of important meetings, glory knows, how can they cope with the pressing problems of the community.

Very truly yours,
WALTER DONNARUMA.

P. S.—Several members of the council informed me that Alderman-at-Large John Schwenk was also among the missing. Evidently he was uninvited. It now appears that Alderman-at-Large Schwenk and myself will have to meet and have our own little secret conference to discuss the miracle budget.

WALTER DONNARUMA.

Delayed Light Emission Called Phosphorescence

The light emitted by a phosphor during exposure to an exciting source of radiation is known as fluorescence. In many cases the fluorescent substance continues to emit light after the exciting radiation is extinguished. Such a delayed emission of light is known as phosphorescence. It is accepted that the two are intimately related as manifestations of the same fundamental phenomenon, namely, excitation of an activator atom which is present in the phosphor at a low concentration.

When the excited electron returns directly to its normal orbit, fluorescence is observed as the result of what has been termed an instantaneous process, writes Gordon R. Fonda in the Journal of Applied Physics. When, however, the return of the electron is for any reason delayed, thus giving rise to phosphorescence, then, by way of distinction, the luminescence has been called the result of a delay process.

The appearance of the phosphorescence in a phosphor is proof that the delay process is contributing at least some of the luminescence, even during direct excitation. Whenever this is no evidence of it will be seen also when the exciting radiation is first applied, for there will be a lag in the development of full luminescence.

Local Post Office Has Its Busiest Christmas Rush in 1939

Regular Force And Extras Keep Business Moving

Postmaster W. R. Kraft
Uses 70 Employees to Handle Record
Holiday Mail

Santa Claus and his busy elves in Toyland had nothing on Postmaster William R. Kraft and his staff of 70 postal employees getting out the Christmas mail in Kingston.

And operations went on as smoothly and with as much dispatch in the postal department, records show, as in Nick's domain where nobody is overlooked.

"It was the busiest Christmas the Kingston post office ever had," Postmaster Kraft told a Freeman reporter, with more than 650,000 pieces of collected mail having gone through the machine that cancels letters and cards. And, at least 800,000 were delivered.

Besides the letters and greetings, there were thousands of parcel post packages handled, stamps sold and other business matters taken care of by the 56 regular employees and their 14 extra helpers.

During the interview about the Christmas rush, Postmaster Kraft glorified his staff for efficiency and cooperation. "There was no let down among the postal workers, even though the mail kept piling up, and even those who neglected to send their packages or write their cards until the last minute may rest assured that they were on time for Christmas if they observed the deadline," he said.

Sitting at his desk on which was a picture of his son, William R. Jr., in West Point Military Academy uniform, the postmaster quoted statistics on the Christmas mail as if he had handled every package, letter and card that went through his department.

He digressed for a moment to say a word about Bill, Jr., and his pal, Ray P. Murphy, both members of the Army football squad, who are spending the holiday vacation with him and Mrs. Kraft at their home, 130 Fair street.

Then he went on with the business of Uncle Sam of which he took charge in January 1, 1935 and quoted some figures on the heavy Christmas mail.

1 Per Cent Increase

"Those 650,000 cards and letters represent an 11 per cent increase in postal business over any year in the history of the department," he said. "The busiest day was the Wednesday before Christmas when 135,000 pieces went through the cancelling machines, representing an increase of 15 per cent over the heaviest day previously recorded."

An average of 350 special delivery letters a day were handled by the postal employees, and there was a 100 per cent increase in air mail. "The war caused this boom in the use of plane service," the former army captain said, "because many of the letters were addressed to Germany and the air lanes were the safest routes, with ships being sunk by warring nations."

Touching on the slogan used by the postal service about dignifying mail by sending it first class, Postmaster Kraft informed the reporter that this meant extra consideration. Out of 4,000 improperly addressed pieces of first class mail, 75 per cent were checked and delivered, but 8,000 cards with cent and a half stamps were destroyed because of wrong or incomplete addresses.

The 650,000 letters and cards that went through the cancelling machines do not represent the whole bulk of greetings and business communications handled by postal clerks and carriers, because there were those mailed from other points. Postmaster Kraft estimated that at least 800,000 were sorted and delivered here.

Week-end Service

Schedules were arranged by the postmaster and his assistants in the various departments so that all of the Christmas mail was picked up and delivered over the week-end to eliminate disappointment on reception.

Besides handling communications, the postal department does a considerable banking business in part, taking care of at least $250,000 worth of money orders a year, and U. S. Treasury Baby Bonds that go to make up a large portion of the million and a half dollars worth of finances for which Postmaster Kraft has to account. In the past month $100,000 worth of Baby Bonds were sold in Kingston, he said.

The central post office, which has been renovated since, was built in 1908. Remodeling started in 1937 and in 1938 it was ready for occupancy again with additional room for postal service and other governmental offices.

Since the completion of the $165,000 addition the social security office is now housed there, also the offices of the civil service commission, the census headquarters for five counties, collector of internal revenue, and the army and navy recruiting headquarters.

A peek behind the scenes bears out the reputation the postal department has for being one of the most important branches of governmental activity because it has to do with dealing directly with the people who call for service and get it from postmasters who handle affairs like William R. Kraft.

bulk of the estate is left to a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Williams of New York. Mrs. de Brabant died December 19 at her home, 7 East 51st street, New York. She had been married three times, two of the marriages ending in divorce.

Her third husband, Mr. de Brabant, who was assistant traffic manager of the Union Pacific railroad, died in 1937. The testatrix was a gunnery of the Society of Friends of Music and other cultural and philanthropic organizations.

Her estate, declared "more than $20,000," has not yet been appraised.

May Young Girl Accept Jewelry From Boy?

Dear Mrs. Post: Is a girl of seventeen too young to be allowed to accept a piece of jewelry from a boy friend?

Answer: A piece of costume jewelry—even possibly a piece of real jewelry if of very trifling cost—would in this day be considered quite proper to accept. She must not of course accept anything of intrinsic value—above all, not a ring that either she or he could mistake for an engagement ring when the other has no serious intentions. (I add this because of a situation explained to me lately by a man who took it for granted that the girl he loved and who accepted his ring was engaged to him. She meant nothing of the sort. At the moment she is in the hospital and he is in jail. This is not the sort of thing I usually write about but it is not beside the point to ask several of my readers to be careful about flippantly accepting—or giving—rings that carry with them no intentions?

May Young Woman Say "Some Other Evening?"

Dear Mrs. Post: If a young woman has had to refuse a certain young man both times he has asked her to go to the theatre, is it permissible for this young woman to suggest a definite night to avoid having him think she is just making excuses to him? I am the young woman in the case and I like the young man very much, and I'm afraid he'll stop asking. There is an old saying that things come in threes and I'm hoping he'll ask me once more. But if I should happen to have an engagement again, I'm going to be miserable if there is nothing I can do about this.

Answer: If you have to refuse the third time, reply frankly, "Why do you ask me on the only night I can't go? I can go any other one, the whole rest of the week." Then it's certainly up to him to make another engagement, but if he doesn't you may ask him to go to something with you.

The Aisle of a Department Store

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a buyer in a large department store. A salesman comes in to see me often and he has yet to remove his hat when talking with me. Is it possible that in a department store a man doesn't have to remove his hat when speaking to a lady?

Answer: It is true that the aisle of a department store is the same as the street, and a man usually keeps his hat on. But even on the street a gentleman removes his hat when he is talking with a lady of his acquaintance.

Deer 'Take' Increases
Albany, N. Y., Dec. 30 (UPI)—Hunters killed 14,511 deer in New York's 1939 fall season, the largest "take" ever reported. The state conservation department, estimating the number at 20 per cent above last year's kill, attributed the increase to a new open season in six southern New York counties. Five counties, four of them in the Adirondack mountain area, each reported more than 1,000 deer shot. They were Allegany, Hamilton, St. Lawrence, Franklin and Essex.

From 15 to 25 per cent more current is required for good distribution of light in a room that has dark rather than light woodwork, it is said.

North-South Grid

Last Workout for Rose Bowl Teams

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 30 (AP)—Opposing coaching forces were optimistic—unusual for this football business—as a sectional rivalry born of war came up for review in good fellowship in today's second annual North-South battle of all-stars.

Fair skies and slightly warmer weather were expected to greet more than 10,000 spectators, including commanders of the remnants of the men who fought in the war between the states, in Yantown Bowl for excitement and harity.

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

Last 10 Years Have Given Fashion World a Wild Ride

Here you see the way the last decade of fashion ended—with that combined horror of the extremely short skirt, the chemise silhouette and the hipline waist.

This white-touched afternoon frock of navy blue crepe illustrates the resulting reformation—lengthened skirt, normal waist, reversion to detail after years of plainness.

A black wool cocktail frock reflects the Mae West influence, which brought back curves after a long vogue of match-slim figures. Notice the high neckline.

The Duchess of Windsor's waist influenced a long line of slim-waisted frocks. Here is an evidence in a chiffon dinner dress, upswedged and a dizzy hat.

The wide-skirted Spanish silhouette, the "covered up look," the tiny waist and the contrast of old-fashioned materials all are evident in this evening gown, typical of those which brought the turbulent decade to a close.

By ADELAIDE KERR
(AP) Fashion Editor

The turbulent thirties were fashion's dizzietest decade. In those ten years, fraught with depression, political intrigue and war, the mode whirled 'round three main silhouettes—slim, belted and bustle-backed—in record time. It decreed a host of contradictions—long skirts and short; the lowest possible decolletés and the cover-up mode; match-slim figures, corsets and curves. It borrowed inspiration all the way from Cleopatra to the day's news, from South Sea islands to northern snows. It launched new fabrics, a new treatment of color, a wealth of gadgets and crazy hats. It saw the development of sports clothes as an important phase of fashion and it saw American designers make their first real bid for a place in the fashion creative field. It had the fashion world dizzy—and it has it dizzy yet.

The decade opened in the midst of one of the biggest fashion scrags the world has seen. When the New Year's bells rang in 1929, women were wearing that post-war horror, the chemise dress—knee-length, straight as a sack, with a waistline placed at the hips. Before the year was out, Paris designers lowered hemlines, raised waistlines, decreed corset-girdles and banished the boyish bob to introduce the longer pencil-roll coiffure.

The cry that went up from women's clubs was heard around the world, but fashion's voice was stronger and gradually the change was made. By the end of 1930 skirts were down to 11 or 12 inches from the ground, girdles molded normal waistlines and a new "mode of elegance" had been launched. Soft afternoon frocks were worn under lavishly furred coats, the beplumed Empress Eugenie hat made its debut and evening frocks of luxurious laces and velvets were worn. In the next two years hemlines gradually lowered and clothes took on an intricate bias cut grafted on a slim profile.

Then came Mae West! Designers, already sensing the need for another change, took one bedazzled look and began to make clothes to show curves. They missed fire at first, for figures fed on diets had few curves. But a chorus of male applause sided with fashion and gradually the silhouette began to shape.

The center of the decade was the era of black; the black frock, the pearl necklace and the black Persian lamb trimmed coat were the last word in chic. The "little black suit" became almost a uniform.

Then Wallis Simpson walked across the scene and the eyes of the fashion world riveted on a woman whose waist was slim and curved. The dress she wore when she married England's former king in the summer of 1937 was designed to emphasize it. The fashion world copied its long, slim, fitted waistline and the concave midriff came to the mode. Skirts began to widen and, gradually, to shorten once more.

The coronation of King George VI turned the mode to luxury; smart women strove for that "woman of the world" look.

In the year of 1938, fashion borrowed inspiration from the Victorian epoch, and modish moderns all tried to look like their grandmothers. Hair swept to the top of the head, leg-of-mutton sleeves, muffs, hoods, veils and tiny hats combined to make the picture. It gathered grace at night when women danced in full hoop-skirted gowns.

The decade of the turbulent thirties closed as it had begun—with a fashion furore, caused this time by corsets. Laced and lightly boned, they came back in '39 to cinch the little waist launched in '37 to a smaller line and start a fashion controversy that raged from California to Maine. That little waist was one of the points on which the year's fashions agreed. The other was short skirts, again established in the mode. Silhouettes varied from slimline slimmers to great fullness and inspiration sources ranged from bustle frocks of the eighties to military uniforms worn in the second world war, and picturesque Spanish court frocks. Most talked-of-future aside from waist lines was the evening mode's covered up look.

Besides its silhouette whirrings, the decade advanced color harmonizing in accessories to an art and brought in elasticized fabrics and new synthetic weaves.

It was a decade the fashion world will long remember. But as the new decade is sighted fashion's dictators, like Europe's statesmen, reflect wishfully on peace.

Varsity Vogues

A corner on the college fashion market is taken by this dashing bolero style! The bodice of the high waisted dress and the lapels and cuffs of the bolero look spirited in contrast. Pattern 9265 may be ordered only in junior miss sizes 9 to 17. Size 13, entire ensemble requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric, 1 yard contrast; dress alone, 3 yards 39 inch fabric. TEN CENTS extra will bring you our new Marian Martin Pattern Book too.

Holiday Garnishing

Some holiday garnishing tricks: Sprinkle red and green small-sized gum drops on the top of jellied, baked or steamed desserts; paint holly with a brush dipped in colored frostings on cookies, cakes and marshmallows; fashion holly from candied cherries and red cinnamon candies and strips of citrus and angelica and place on top of frosted cookies; fill orange halves (pulp removed) with cranberry jelly, and when stiff cut into rings and use for surrounding the turkey.

A Buffet Holiday
To save time and energy Christmas morning why not serve breakfast buffet style? Let the family help themselves—and let each member carry the used dishes to the kitchen.

Cranberry Ornaments

Cranberry bells or stars make an appropriate garnish for the holiday salad bowl. Cut out the shapes from cranberry slices. To make even the cutter in cold water is used.

Bristle-Stiffener

To help keep brush bristles from them every two weeks in water—two tablespoons of salt to a cup of cold water. Always hang up brooms or brushes so the bristles won't bend.

TEN YEARS OF GLAMOUR

In THE decade's parade of glamour, the "It" girl of the roaring 'Twenties became the Oomph girl of the Tempestuous 'Thirties.

The late Jean Harlow led it, unloosing a tide of platinum blonde tresses. Marlene Dietrich legged it to Hollywood to give the perennially glamorous Garbo competition. Myrna Loy gave the decade its perfect glamour wife. Katherine Hepburn and Bette Davis proved that ability to act was no drawback. Jeanette MacDonald demonstrated how glamour ladies should act at a typical Hollywood wedding and Carole Lombard how a lady should act to grab off the decade's No. 1 glamour man, Clark Gable.

Mae West and Fan-Dancer Sally Rand started glamour traditions of their own. Sonja Henie, Alice Marble and Eleanor Holm introduced glamour to sports. Debutante Brenda Frazier introduced it to society.

Toward the end of the decade, Zorina, Hedy Lamarr and Ann Sheridan all flashed glamour. But it remained for Mary Martin, who, on the strength of one song, became Broadway's greatest toast in the 1930's, to carry the glamour banner at the end.

Look Like the Duchess of Kent If You Want 1940-Style Glamour

By JOAN DURHAM
(AP Feature Service Writer)

Glamour, 1940—how will it differ from the Glamour of 1939? And who will best typify Glamour 1940?

The answer to the second question, according to several experts, would be England's Duchess of Kent.

Here are some of the forecasts about the new type:

Mainbocher (Paris designer responsible for the wasp waist and back-to-corsets movement):

"She'll look like a goddess, but she'll know all the answers."

Gilbert Bundy (Illustrator):

"She'll be individual—a cross between Scarlett O'Hara and Camille. Scarlett without the temper. When she chooses a man, she has herself well in hand."

Lura De Gez (New York hair stylist):

"She'll have a shining look, as if she had just fallen in love the night before. Maybe she will have just fallen in love, but if not, the look will be there."

Tony Sarg (Illustrator and marionette artist):

"She won't be the tall, rangy girl who's just outgrown the awkward stage. She'll be a full-fledged lady—and not cafe society. The Duchess of Kent fills the bill."

Dean Cornwell (Illustrator and mural painter):

"She'll have a full figure with nice long, straight legs. And she'll be bursting with health. Like a plum—almost ready to crack, but not flabby. Medium height, well-rounded and with good hard flesh and muscles all coordinated."

Valentia (American designer):

"She will be the revival of La Belle Dame, representing real background plus individuality plus elegance. Yes, I'd nominate the Duchess of Kent, too."

Here's a composite view of the new Glamour Girl:

Height—about 5 feet 7. (No taller than before, perhaps even a tiny bit shorter.) Slender, but well-rounded body.

Average weight—120 pounds.

Bust—34-35, waist 26-27, hips about 35.

Skin—healthy, glowing, preferably ivory-white with a rosy tinge underneath.

Hair—blondes, red-heads and brunettes all come into the picture for a change. (Black was THE color last year.)

Eyebrows—completely natural (last year's were thin and arched); eyelashes long enough to flicker provocatively.

There's one thing the 1940 title contender definitely must have: She must look and act like a lady, casually elegant, because she'll be too busy to concentrate too much on herself.

The Duchess of Kent, named as the type of Glamour Girl 1940 will bring forth, is shown in a new photograph by Harlip.

Common Courtesy—When You Take A Holiday Trip

By JOAN DURHAM
(AP Feature Service Writer)

Mark your luggage plainly before you start a holiday trip. Then you won't have trouble finding it when it gets piled with a lot of other vacationists' luggage.

Do a little careful planning about how you pack, too. Put all the things you'll need when you retire at night into one bag, for instance, your evening clothes in another and your holiday gifts all together in a third.

Be considerate about fellow-travelers. Don't spread your personal effects all over the dress room.

About tipping: 50 cents for 24 hours is a good rule for tipping such people as stewards and porters. (If your trip is less than overnight you may give the pullman porter about a quarter.)

Baggage porters get 15 cents to a quarter for carrying a reasonable amount of hand luggage a short distance. If there is lots of baggage or the porter has to check your things and then go get them later or stand around a long time, he deserves 50 cents or so.

Dining room tips should be about 10 per cent of the bill. You tip in pullman dining cars after each meal. Dining room stewards on ships usually are tipped the night before you dock. Ten to 15 cents a meal is plenty for them, too.

There is no tipping connected with air travel except for the porter who carries your bag from the plane to the waiting room.

Away down town: Brick buildings, which seem to be returning to their original dust. Many go away back to the early days of New York. They were fine homes once. Now they are the abodes of poverty. Second-floor windows looking right out onto the tracks. All through the night, the pounding of trains. Pallid youngsters on fire escapes. A little girl playing with a doll made from rags and with shoe buttons for eyes. Mothers washing. Mothers always washing. And always washings flapping on roofs.

South Ferry at last. Why South Ferry? I don't know and haven't been able to find out. But it's South Ferry on the elevated and it's South Ferry on the subway and thus South Ferry up and down. Staten Island Ferry will be better. Or The Battery. That would mean something. Everyone knows about The Battery. But if I am to catch the St. George ferry at South Ferry I'll have to get up and join the hurrying throng. And anyway, it's the end of the line.

They were given eight weeks' training and are now used to deliver dispatches and orders, especially through heavy fire; to stand guard over munition and food depots in the field, and to aid the medical corps by searching through forests, underbrush and cornfields for wounded.

Leader Visits Kingston

Elder Eldon B. Romney, president of the Hudson district of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon), is planning to be present for the Sunday evening services in the Ulster county court house. The meeting will start as usual at 7 o'clock in the evening and will present two speakers. Elder Rev. L. Park will speak on "Necessity of Baptism." Elder Claude Pomeroy will give a brief summary of the major points of "Mormon" philosophy.

Opening Postponed

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Transcontinental Broadcast System, composed of 102 stations, announced today its opening had been postponed from January 1 to February 1 because of "repudiation" of contracts by two clients which had scheduled 15 night-time hours a week.
